

London Transport Depot Museum - Tuesday 16th November 2021 at 11.00am

118 Museum Way, Gunnersbury Lane, Acton, London W3 9BQ

Nearest underground station – Acton Town on the District and Piccadilly lines

This special museum is part of the London Transport Museum (which is located in Covent Garden). It contains all of the exhibits that cannot be displayed in the Covent Garden building either because they are too large such as old vehicles or complete train units or just stored awaiting display at a later date. This visit gives you the opportunity to explore 200 years of transport history - trains, buses, models, signs and more.

Public access to this building is only permitted on a few special open days during the year but we have been able to book a private tour just for the IBM Club but limited to a maximum of 30 people. On our tour we will be accompanied by one of the museum staff who will tell us about the various exhibits and also will be able to answer any of your questions. The tour will take 90 minutes to 2 hours and will commence at 11.00am. You may wish to watch a video that gives an insight into what you would see as you tour the museum (it is around 30 minutes long) – click on this link to view it - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0ajJQDmPSqo>

NOTE: As this is a working depot, access to some of the vehicles and objects may need you to go up and down steps and there may be some trip hazards near equipment undergoing maintenance. Also, if you wish to drive to the museum, limited parking is available (more information about this will be provided prior to your visit). If you are a Blue Badge holder and would like us to reserve a parking space, please indicate this on the back of the booking form,
